TYPES OF CLIENTS

SFMI accepts individuals, trusts, partnerships, private investment companies and pension plans as clients. The minimum asset value to open an account with SFMI is $100,000. Households can group smaller accounts together to reach the minimum.

METHODS OF ANALYSIS, INVESTMENT STRATEGIES AND RISK OF LOSS

SFMI utilizes three Investment Strategies for its managed discretionary client accounts:

1. SFMI Bull/Bear Allocation Portfolio

The Bull/Bear Portfolio (“B/B”) is a unique portfolio designed to protect investor’s wealth through a balanced allocation in four primary asset classes: equities, commodities and hard assets, long-term bonds and a Treasury-bill/currency component.

However, this is not a long only, passive allocation model. By employing the unique Grail Trend and Timing Indicator (“The Grail”), this portfolio follows the major trend for each targeted asset class. SFMI may be either long or short in each asset class, and will hold that position as long as the major trend, Bull or Bear, remains in force. The portfolio will then reverse position, once a change in the major trend has been confirmed.

The base allocation is anticipated to be: 30% Equities; 30% Commodities/Gold; 20% Long-term Bonds; 20% Treasury-bill/Currency. At the discretion of the manager, these percentages may be revised at any time.

For the Equity asset class, SFMI will select among the major market indices (which may include international indexes) that demonstrate the strongest correlation to the direction of the macro-trend identified by The Grail.

For the Hard Asset class, the portfolio will be apportioned between gold Exchange Traded Funds (“ETFs”), individual commodity funds and/or a general commodity index in a ratio representing the greatest potential over the intermediate to longer term time frames.

For the Long-term Bond allocation, SFMI will be either long bonds, employing (for example) the TLT (iShare Barclay 20+ Year Treasury Bond) ETF, or short bonds by using the TBT (Ultra Short 20 + Year Treasury Proshares) ETF or other bond indices that demonstrate the strongest correlation to the direction of the macro-trend identified by The Grail.

For the currency allocation, the Bull/Bear Allocation Portfolio will either have an anchor position in a U.S. Treasury-Bill Money Fund and/or ETF; or, at those times when we identify an intermediate to long-term downward trend in the U.S. dollar, we will have this portion of the portfolio in the Merk Hard Currency Fund, or another vehicle that SFMI judges to be a superior alternative.

Risk Factors: Please note that past performance is not necessarily an indication of future performance. All investments are subject to changes in the current market conditions and therefore your investment return and principal value will fluctuate, and there could be a gain or loss when your positions are sold.

SFMI will use its proprietary timing indicators (The Grail) to attempt to be long during bullish periods and short during bearish periods in the chosen sectors in which it trades. There is no guarantee that this timing methodology will be successful.

2. SFMI Total Return Portfolio

The SFMI Total Return Portfolio (“TR”) is structured to provide investors with a growing stream of income to the extent compatible with a steady increase in portfolio value.

The core of this portfolio is comprised of individual domestic and international income stocks, and select ETFs whose flow-through yields meet our criteria. In addition, SFMI may add growth-oriented vehicles that track major trends within the overall markets. During equity or bond market bear phases, these may include hedges, as well as positions to manage the impact of the dollar’s declining purchasing power on the portfolio’s income stream.

Risk Factors: Please note that past performance is not necessarily an indication of future performance. All investments are subject to changes in the current market conditions and therefore your investment return and principal value will fluctuate, and there could be a gain or loss when your positions are sold.

SFMI will use its proprietary timing indicators (The Grail) to attempt to be long during bullish periods and short during bearish periods in the chosen sectors in which it trades. There is no guarantee that this timing methodology will be successful.

The Total Return Fund utilizes individual dividend-paying stocks in its portfolio, which can be more volatile than ETFs or Mutual Funds. Each of these individual securities could be adversely affected by its own financial characteristics as well as market conditions.

3. SFMI Precious Metals and Natural Resources Portfolio

This portfolio is the most aggressive of the SFMI investment models.

The SFMI Precious Metals and Natural Resources (“PMNR”) portfolio seeks to obtain substantial capital gains exclusively in the precious metals, energy and diversified natural resources sectors of the market. The portfolio is built upon a core of undervalued opportunities and those we feel have extraordinary potential for major resource discoveries. Special attention is devoted to opportunities in “junior” companies throughout the mining and conventional, as well as the alternative energy sectors. For stock selection, we rely on a variety of outside research sources combined with our own in-house research specialists in these sectors.

In an effort to maximize portfolio returns, SFMI will actively trade gold, silver, and select natural resource ETFs or Ultra-ETFs (2x1 leverage), as well as inverse ETFs to (at times) hedge the portfolio’s core holdings. We will also make trading calls on large cap equities within these sectors. The PMNR is appropriate for aggressive investors willing to take on high levels of risk in order to obtain high potential rewards. The portfolio is committed to capturing a portion of the substantial potential gains from the secular bull markets currently under way in the gold and natural resources sectors.

Risk Factors: Please note that past performance is not necessarily an indication of future performance. Changes in the market can substantially affect the returns in this portfolio. Your investment return and principal value will fluctuate, and there could be a gain or loss when your positions are sold.

SFMI will use its proprietary timing indicators (The Grail) to attempt to be long during bullish periods and hedged or short during bearish periods in the chosen sectors in which it trades. There is no guarantee that this timing methodology will be successful as market conditions may change.

The industry sectors in which PMNR trades can be extremely volatile. The oil & gas and precious metals sectors are cyclical in nature and can be subject to “boom-bust” periods. During a bust period, despite SFMI’s best efforts to hedge against loss, your account may experience a steep decline in value.

Individually Managed Accounts Advisory Programs

After thorough consultation with high-net worth clients, SFMI may agree to customize an account tailored to a client's specific goals, objectives and financial circumstances. SFMI thereafter will exercise full discretion over investment decisions in the portfolio, while maintaining regular contact with the account owner to monitor any changes in the investor's circumstances or investment objectives.

This service may be appropriate if a client has an existing portfolio of long-held securities in which tax-management of the assets makes an immediate conversion into a SFMI managed portfolio ill advised.

Non-discretionary Advisory Program

SFMI will assist those clients who prefer to make their own buy and sell decisions by reviewing all client positions on a monthly basis.

Using a unique timing indicator, The Grail, SFMI will provide months Buy, Sell, and Hold ratings on all securities in client accounts, as well as recommending stop-loss orders to attempt to protect against potential losses of principal. This is a non-discretionary model. In this model, SFMI will act only as an adviser, not as a fiduciary and all decisions are made by the client.

SFMI utilizes margin in many of its client's portfolios. Any clients who open margin accounts will be provided with full margin disclosure documents. Margin clients should be made aware of the following:

- They may lose more funds than are deposited in the margin account;
- The clearing firm can force the sale of securities or other assets in a client's account(s);
- The clearing firm can sell securities or other assets without contacting the client;
- Clients are not entitled to choose which securities or other assets in their account(s) are liquidated or sold to meet a margin call; and
- The clearing firm can increase its "house" maintenance margin requirements at any time and is not required to provide advanced written notice to clients.

Margin accounts involve risk and are not suitable for all clients.

The code holds each officer and entity responsible for promoting honest and ethical conduct, including the ethical handling of actual or apparent conflicts of interest between personal and professional relationships, fair disclosure to the SEC or other applicable regulatory agencies and prompt reporting of violations of the Code to appropriate regulatory agencies.

Regarding Conflicts of Interests, the overall principle is that the personal interest of a Related Person should not be placed improperly before the interest of the client. More specifically, each Related Person must not use his or her personal influence or personal relationship improperly to influence investment decisions or financial reporting by the client whereby the Related Person would benefit personally to the detriment of the client; or cause the client to take action, or fail to take action, for the individual personal benefit of the Covered Officer rather than the benefit of the client.

The Investment Adviser may advise clients to purchase securities of the same class and type that it owns in an account that is separate from the clients. However, pursuant to the Code, the Applicant may not knowingly favor its own account over any account for which it acts as General Partner or Investment Adviser. Those transactions are reviewed separately so that the client obtains the best executed price.

SFMI’s Related Persons may invest in the same securities that it recommends to its clients. SFMI will attempt to ensure that clients receive favorable pricing. If securities are being bought for multiple clients and Related Persons, SFMI will trade in bulk and average price the trades so that everyone is treated on an equal basis.

Representatives of the Investment Adviser may advise the client to purchase interests in The Questus Fund or The Real Asset Income Fund, pooled investment vehicles, after determining whether or not a specific client meets the eligibility requirements.
